

Prez Says from Bill Rains

The second week of September found a group of Davis flyfishers on their way to Montana. We had arrived in West Yellowstone on Friday, September 7 in the midst of a light snow. The weather cleared but remained chilly. We checked around and were told that the South Fork of the Madison River, where it enters Hebgen Lake, could be fishing. We camped on the South Fork at Lonesomehurst Campgrounds and woke up Saturday to cold weather. Bob Zasoski checked his fish thermometer and the temperature had gone below the minimum scale of the thermometer. He estimated that it was at least 27° F or less. The fishing turned out to be excellent. Numerous wild rainbows were caught, none less than 15", most 18" with an occasional 19-21" fish landed. There were plenty of 16-19" white fish hooked, which turned out to be a very sporting fish on a 4-weight rod. The fishing continued excellent for the two days and we continued to have permanent smiles on our faces. On Tuesday morning we were up early ready to do battle with the Hebgen Lake rainbows. Just as we started to consume the ever-popular instant oatmeal the camp caretaker rushed over to us and informed us of the terrorist attack. We were stunned. The permanent smile disappeared. He had a trailer with satellite TV and was tuned in to the events. We then responded with anger, frustration and sorrow. We were concerned with family and friends and through the use of cellular and pay phones we checked on them, another very human response. As the events became more horrible the urge to do something became stronger and stronger, however, the reality was that we could not respond. We were in one of nature's truly beautiful areas, surrounded by high mountains and trees and water. The birds still gave out their songs, the Canada honkers continued their discussions with each other and the fish continued to rise. The contrast of the evil perpetuated on New York and Washington and the beauty and peace of our surroundings was incredible. The mind does interesting things to you at times like this. My response was that as a society we have made successful efforts in conserving and preserving our natural resources, and, after the events of Tuesday, September 11 it seems even more vital that we strive harder to preserve our way of life, our culture and our compassion for all living things. It is a critical time in our history. Personally I have enormous faith in the humanity of the American people and historians will see us as a unique and proud society fulfilling our responsibility to the global human race.

We are combining a trek for the BIG Bows of Sugar Creek Ranch with the Closing of the regular trout season on the Upper Sac. The Upper Sac season closes on Thursday, November 15th. Ron will be there to get the last grabs on usually the best day of the season. Members are invited to join in on Thursday. Friday, we will fish Siskiyou Lake.

Saturday, our group will go to Sugar Creek Ranch for a day of trophy trout angling. There are 8 spots available for Sugar Creek. We use 5-6 wt rods one with a sinking line another with a floater. Streamers (Chartruese Bunny Leech) are really good dredged deep. Nymphs and midges are good on a floater. Here's your chance to try all your still water tricks. You can get more info by going to on the web to www.sugarcreekranch.com.

The Sugar Creek Ranch access fee is a special $130 per person. SCR Fee is due to Ron by November 1st. (Ron Rabun, PO Box 45, Dunsmuir Ca 96025 or at the meeting)

We will finish up the day on Sugar Creek by heading back to Dunsmuir for dinner at Maddalena's Café. A wonderful treat that is guaranteed to enhance those angling stories.

BASS IN THE MOONLIGHT

by John Forsyth

In late July, despite my better judgment, I agreed to accompany John Reynolds to the famous Spenceville Ponds. I have heard reports about these notorious ponds for the last several years as John tried to make these sound like actual fishing destinations. I swore I would never spend a day walking sun-baked red dirt roads in the foothills east of Beale AFB to fish some scraped out mud hole lined with cattails, all in pursuit of scrappy red-eared sunfish or a bass upwards of 8 inches.

I don't know if it was the July heat or just curiosity that that made me say, "OK, and I'll drive" when John asked if I might be interested in dodging gunfire in Spenceville (the pond is over the hill behind a firing range). Though the map shows these ponds tantalizingly close, the actual drive is over 70 miles, a fair amount on brain-numbing washboard roads. As we drove past the sprawl that is Lincoln, John mentioned that he may have left his rod at home. A quick look in the back showed no white PVC pipe, I mean custom rod tube. Oh well, he did bring his recently purchased Soviet camera made sometime during WWII, and it's always nice just to hike the foothills in July. After about 30 minutes of walking we came to the pond.

The summer cattails surrounded much of the shoreline and a thick layer of algae and weeds carpeted the first 10 feet of water. It was about 90 degrees, but a breeze was starting to pick up. I rigged my rod, our only rod. A few casts with a small popper produced two 4 to 5 inch bass, so I decided not to hog the action, giving my rod to John. He tried this side and the far bank, but no fish. We ate a snack and noted how this would probably be a pleasant place in the early spring when the weeds and grass were green and more than about 40% of the water was fishable. It was about 8 O'clock when we decided we better start back. Just then a larger fish splashed near the far bank, then another. Hmm. "Maybe we should try that side one more time", I said. The fish continued to leap high out of the water chasing the numerous dragonflies that suddenly appeared. My first cast seemed to land right on top of a leaping bass. "Did you see that!" I shouted. The next cast had the same result, but this time I had a 12 inch bass on. The fish were actually jumping and taking the popper before it hit the water! I caught four fish on successive casts and gave the rod to John. He continued to hook up and had the largest fish of the day, a nice 15 incher. After about a dozen fish, it was too dark to continue, and we walked out through the oak studded fields by the moonlight. The breeze was cool, the stars twinkled, and I decided maybe Spenceville wasn't such a bad place after all. Thanks John.

FLY PATTERN OF THE MONTH

[Due to Bob's fishing trip, we are holding an alternative contest for the pattern of the month.]

"The Creative Woolly Bugger"

This month's pattern is a Woolly Bugger. We are calling it the "Creative Woolly Bugger" since we there will be no specific formula but just some guidelines. You might call this the "Woolly Bugger Open" since the following "loose" guidelines will apply to tying and judging.

- Pattern must qualify under various styles and definition of a Woolly Bugger. (leeches, matukas, zonkers not allowed)
- Within hook size range 12 to 6.
- Any color or combination of colors allowed.
- May or may not contain flash.

Judging standards:

- Must be a Woolly Bugger as known by a various styles among fly tyers. The judges will confer on meeting this standard.
- Tying style, color, material selection and presentation will be considered in the judging.
- Overall fish enticing features will be important.

Have fun tying this one and we hope to see a lot of creative entries.

PUTAH CREEK

Rob Farrangaro REPLY REQUESTED RE: PUTAH CREEK

Since I'm leaving town this weekend, I would appreciate your prompt feedback on one of the few public recommendations that DFG is >supporting. They have recommended elimination of the Nov- April "fly >fishing only" restriction on Putah Creek and intend to allow any artificial barbless lure. Use of bait will still be prohibited. (See page 26) This >proposal was originated by Sep Hedrickson radio personality and who is featured at ISE shows. Here's the DFG text:

Subsection (b)(147) Putah Creek (Solano and Yolo Cos.) from Solano Lake to Monticello Dam. 1.Hendrickson, Sep, 7/25/01.

Eliminate the restriction to "flies only" which now applies to Putah Creek from Monticello Dam downstream to Solano Lake from November 16 to the Friday preceding the last Saturday in April (and retain the zero bag limit and the restriction which prohibits the use of bait in this area at this time).

Department Recommendation/Analysis: Accept. Current trout fishing regulations for Putah Creek between Solano Lake and Monticello Dam (Solano and Yolo Counties) specify that during the period from November 16 through the Friday preceding the last Saturday in April only catch-and-release fishing is allowed (the bag limit is zero) and anglers may use only artificial flies with barbless hooks (fly fishing only).

The Department is supporting this public recommendation to change the fishing methods restrictions to allow artificial lures with barbless hooks. The change will continue to allow only catch-and-release fishing, and continue to prohibit the use of bait during this period. The Department is supporting the proposed change because no biological justification for prohibiting the use of artificial lures has been identified, and the change will simplify the regulations by making them consistent with statewide standards.

Their arguments for this change are:

-There is no biological reason for eliminating artificial lures

-This expands catch and release fishing opportunities

-It simplifies the regulations

I'm not an expert on Putah Creek, so I could use help determining what response we want to make, if any.

This proposal raises at least two concerns:

1. Those few places with "fly fishing only" regs create unique angling experiences. Is this important to us?

What does the elimination of this fly fishing section on Putah Creek say about the Department's goal to provide a diversity of angling experiences? What keeps DFG from eliminating all "fly fishing only" waters using the same logic as Putah Creek.

2. I do know that Putah Creek gets horribly crowded...not only on weekends. Shouldn't the quality of the angling experience enter into the decision?

Does anyone know the history of how this stretch became fly fishing only? Should we be raising hell over this, and if so, who's willing to put in some time on it, possibly including letter writing and/or a trip to the Nov Commission meeting in Redding?

Thanks for your prompt response.

Annual Picnic Wrap -UP

The annual picnic was held on July 31st in Davis Community Park. The weather was reasonable and approximately 40 members and guests enjoyed a fine barbecue dinner of cheeseburgers, hot dogs, grilled corn, and all the trimmings. John Forsyth and John Hodgson manned the grill, and no one left hungry. Thanks to all who helped make this another successful event. I would like to recognize Mark and Kim Kubik, Mark and Maria Tebbutt, Scott Kubik, John Hodgson, and the ever present John (Mr. Family Values) Reynolds for their efforts. It could not have happened without you! Mark your calendars for next years picnic.
